ManTech Wins Chief Learning Officer Magazine’s LearningElite Gold Award for Innovative Employee Education Programs

April 4, 2019

HERNDON, Va., April 04, 2019 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- ManTech (Nasdaq: MANT) today announced that the company has won its second LearningElite Gold Award from Chief Learning Officer Magazine, sponsor of the honor bestowed annually to organizations for the best learning and development programs.

Accepting the award for ManTech: Damian DiPippa - SVP & GM, Mission & Intelligence Solutions; Yvonne Vervaet - SVP, Growth & Capabilities; Karen Gardner - Chief Learning Officer; Stephanie Flory - Workforce Planning & Technical Training Manager, and Maggie Sams - Principal Technical Writer.

“At ManTech, we are totally committed to developing and continually expanding in-depth educational programs that enhance employees’ skills on the job and help advance their careers,” said Jeff Brody, ManTech’s Chief Human Resources Officer. “We are very proud to be recognized with the 2019 LearningElite Gold Award, an honor bestowed by peers, including leading chief learning officers and senior learning and development practitioners.”

“The organizations ranked at the top of the 2019 LearningElite are not only recognized for achieving outstanding outcomes for their own enterprises, but they also provide a significant yardstick against which other companies can assess their own progress toward turning learning and development into a measurable driver of business results,” said Sarah Kimmel, director of research and advisory services for Human Capital Media, which publishes Chief Learning Officer.
